I. Purpose

This section describes the UC Davis administration and the advisory groups that enable campus community participation in decision-making.

II. Policy

- A. Decision-making authority and responsibility on the Davis campus flows from the Chancellor and is delegated to the appropriate level within the campus organization to align responsibility and accountability.
- B. Decision-making benefits from input by those affected by the decision. Work groups, committees, councils, task forces, professional staff groups, and other advisory groups afford opportunities for the campus community to provide input into campus decision-making.

III. Responsibilities

A. Chancellor

The Chancellor is the person ultimately responsible for all functions of the campus community.

B. Provost & Executive Vice Chancellor

The Provost & Executive Vice Chancellor serves both as the administrator responsible for coordination of all operational programs of the campus and as chief academic officer for the campus, and in the absence of the Chancellor, acts for the Chancellor on all matters.

C. Vice chancellor

A vice chancellor acts for the Chancellor for campuswide administrative functions, administers certain units, and has coordinating responsibility for cross-functional groups. When both the Chancellor and the Provost & Executive Vice Chancellor are absent, the assigned Vice Chancellor acts for the Chancellor on all matters.

D. Vice provost

A vice provost acts for the Provost in carrying out campuswide academic administrative responsibilities, administers certain units, and has coordinating responsibility for cross-functional groups.

E. Dean

A dean has an academic and administrative responsibility for functions within the college or school and coordinating and administrative responsibility for inter-college/school units delegated to a particular dean for administration such as campuswide divisions, extended learning, research centers, and institutes.

F. Department chair or unit head

The department or unit is a fundamental administrative unit on the campus since it organizes the resources that support teaching, research, and public service. The department chair or unit head provides the leadership and is responsible for the activities of the department through the dean or vice chancellor.

G. Principles of Community

Each organizational unit has the responsibility for promoting an environment that supports the UC Davis Principles of Community.

IV. Advisory and Decision-Making Groups

A. Work group

A work group is an administrative group responsible for implementing programs and carrying out policy decisions in a functional area that crosses administrative lines of authority. Although the group strives for consensus, the chair, as the administrator responsible for the primary functional area, is held accountable for the decision and its implementation. Work groups are appointed by the administrator responsible for the primary function and are composed of individuals from each administrative unit whose activities or responsibilities will be affected by the group's decision.

B. Administrative advisory committee

An administrative advisory committee is composed of faculty, students, staff, and administrators, and in some cases alumni and members of the community, to advise administrative units and work groups on policies affecting campus life and operations, or are committees mandated by existing University policy or Federal or State regulations. The administrative advisory committee system is one of the mechanisms by which campuswide participation in decision-making is promoted.

C. Administrative council

An administrative council functions as both a work group and an advisory committee. A council is created when it is determined that direct input of a specified advisory group is essential to the decision-making process of a work group and it cannot be achieved through the use of a standing advisory committee.

D. Task force

A task force is an ad hoc group of individuals appointed to study and make recommendations on specific issues. Membership is composed largely of experts in the area under consideration. A task force may or may not be representative of all constituencies, and generally ceases to exist once a final report has been submitted and accepted.

E. Professional staff advisory group

A professional staff advisory group is a standing group responsible to the Chancellor and vice chancellors for review, analysis, and advice on a specific function. The group is composed of professional staff from appropriate administrative units who have expertise that bears upon the function or activity.

F. Campus advisory group

A campus advisory group is a standing group responsible to the Chancellor and vice chancellors for review, assessment, recommendation, and assistance for implementation on specific campus functions or activities that cross administrative organizations. The group may be composed of representatives from faculty, staff, students, and administrative units, and may include public members. Membership is appointed by the appropriate administrator and/or constituencies. The responsible administrator has authority and responsibility for final decision and implementation.
